Expect the unexpected. An unusual combination of musicians, not so much Bob and Mal Sedergreen whose musical affiliations spans 30 year of Jazz and Blues at not only the local but the international level but the addition of electric bass wizard and master musician Evripides Evripidu and the inclusion of the popular and dynamic young drummer Aaron McCullough.

This quartet will all be playing together for the first time so expect some explosions or even implosions.

When Paul Coyle and Mal Sedergreen come together to play jazz their empathy, energy and understanding of the idiom are obvious, as it should be, knowing they are both the sons of well known Jazz pianists, Graeme Coyle and Bob Sedergreen.

Both grew up to be fine horn players, Paul is a very handy vocalist as well, both are committed and popular music teachers and both have played a lot of jazz. At this gig, they will be ably supported, by, bassist Ivan Rosa, and drummer Mark Voogd, who are both associates of Bob on piano and will bring edge to the performance.

By popular demand this will be the combos, not to be missed second concert appearance at Southside.
